

Speech-Language Pathology

Interested in a career in speech-language pathology?

The University of Alaska Anchorage is offering preparatory course work by distance delivery to non-resident students who want to become fully qualified speech-language pathologists. You must already have a Bachelor's Degree to enter this program.

UAA is offering leveling courses for those who don't hold an undergraduate degree in speech-language pathology.

These are core pre-requisite (leveling) courses most graduate programs require for candidates who have an out-of-field degree.

Online leveling courses currently offered by UAA:

- a. Phonetics
- b. Language Development
- c. Articulation and Phonology
- d. Audiology
- e. Aural Rehabilitation
- f. Anatomy and Physiology
- g. Bioacoustics

There is no formal admission process to the UAA offered leveling courses.

Course sequences begin in January of each year. Please submit the attached pre-screening form by November 1st for registration information.

Graduate School

Candidates are responsible for contacting the graduate program to which they are applying to determine if their program will accept these courses.

Course syllabi from past semesters can be provided upon request.
