September 2008

Dear Friends,

It is my pleasure to welcome you to Alaska for the 4th International Project Management Conference. As you complete your important work exchanging ideas and experiences to revolutionize today's project management knowledge and techniques for the future, I hope you will also have the opportunity to enjoy all that scenic Alaska has to offer.

Your efforts will influence how technology-oriented projects are managed throughout the world. I hope this conference helps further your efforts to apply the best practices of project management to the issues facing us today, and I applaud the University of Alaska Anchorage's Engineering, Science and Project Management (ESPM) Department for providing this forum for the exchange of information and ideas among practitioners in this important field.

I welcome you to Anchorage and wish you a successful conference.

Sincerely,

Sarah Palin
Governor
