Empowering an Environmental Sound Russia

United Nations Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues,

Aware of climate change and the ongoing environmental concerns that have harmed the indigenous community of/in Russia,

Expressing its satisfaction in the existing relationship and communication that the Russian government maintains with all of its citizens, but especially its indigenous peoples.

Having Considered ways that indigenous people can represent themselves in the Russian government,

Seeking to increase the Russian economy, with protocol that is sensitive to specific environmental needs and protection,

1. Reminds the Yukaghir people of the diplomatic actions of the government through assigning specific lands to indigenous groups, while fairly distributing resources and access to subsistence;
2. Further reminds the indigenous community that when they comply with current legislation, existing constitutional rights and presidential edicts they have higher chances of attaining self-governance;
3. Encourages the indigenous people of Russia to maintain their trust in the timing of the Russian government's environmental policy plan which will be fulfilled in 2025;
4. Welcomes the Yukaghir tribe to express their concerns, but reminds them that action required for them must be provided for all people of Russia.
